Spain as a Teacher
England Decides
If You Saw Monkeys

In Detroit eleven out of twelve who decided to do away with Catholics, Negroes and Jews in the United States and killed as few as possible, discovered that they had undertaken too much. Seven are convicted of murder in the first degree. The other four were convicted of murder in the second degree. The Jews Catholics and Negroes will remain along with other assorted Americans.

Before Toledo was taken by the Fascist insurgents, according to the Associated Press, six hundred Catholic priests, locked up in the city, were slaughtered by the "Madrid government" forces.

Paris schoolboys were taken to an extremely unpleasant museum where the results of the war and devastation were illustrated in wax figures. Spain teaches the world to study the effects of certain theories of government and non-government.

After some winking, England decides to live up to her non-dispute obligations and the British promise in Palestine. Martial law is declared and British General Bull has substantial powers and will use them.

England had to choose between her promise to the Jewish people and the danger involved in offending one hundred million Mohammedans, important to the empire. She chose to make good her promise to protect a Jewish homeland in Palestine.

Tickets for the baseball championship series, normally $5.00 each, gathered in by speculators, are sold to the public for $20.

If you saw monkeys paying more than they could afford to watch a coconut-dropping contest, more deeply interested in that contest than in anything else on earth, you might say, "that explains the fact that they have remained monkeys, and have evolved no farther."

Japan, says to China in substance, "You Chinese must stop hating Japan, and must recognize in her China a superior nation. This reminds you of the father of Frederick the Great pressing little boys who make faces at him, threatening with his cane, saying, 'If I make you love me.'"

An important question for Japan is whether she will be able to make China love and cooperate with her, or whether she will create for herself in Asia a nation five times as big as Japan in numbers, filled with a hatred that dates far back and ready to turn toward Russia.

Every middle aged doctor will tell you that, formerly, the terror of his professional life was diptheria that killed thousands of children. Their cases were almost hopeless from the start. Today, thanks to science, which takes disease seriously, and fights it intelligently, diptheria is the least of the doctor's worries.

In the last five weeks, among the millions of children in Great Britain, there has not been one death from diptheria.

Our South American neighbor, Nicaragua, forbids all radio, motion pictures and other gadgetry, devices in that country, all must be destroyed.

Nicaragua's government says such machines "teach children in gambling and their owners are parasites of the worst kind, making a profit of 65 cents on every dollar."

In this country, Legislatures, corrupt officials, public indifference, combine to promote gambling, which breeds laziness, unemployment and lack of ambition.

From the "real sport" horse racing, the "cheap sport" of dog racing, all the way down to the numbers game, and the various lotteries, everything possible is Continued on Page 2, Column 3

Hagis' Challenge Unanswered

G.O.P. Rally Tonight Quizzed

By L. CONANT, JR.
By WILLIAM K. CONWAY

James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, will be glad to debate Father Coughlin, but not until after November, he stated to a group of G.O.P. candidates.

Roosevelt, who has been touring the state urging the reelection of his father, was challenged by Arthur St. John of Quincy, an ardent advocate of the radio priest.

St. John was seated in the audience at the Central Junior High School, Quincy, listening to the forum which Roosevelt is conducting throughout the state.

He rose to his feet to ask a question, but was told to wait until after the question and answer period.

CURLEY CRASH DRIVER LOSES LICENSE

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank Goodwin today suspended for an indefinite period the automobile driving license of Louis E. Ferrell, Jr., whose car was in collision with that of Governor Curley in Dighton last Thursday.

"The entire blame for this accident rests with this boy," Goodwin declared.

"After listening to him, and after looking at him, it is doubtful that he ever should have been given a license."

The registrar explained this personal comment by saying that although Ferrell's home is in Fall River, in the general locality of the crash, the youth didn't know the road and didn't know there was a curve in the highway where the accident occurred.

To the "bitterness with which the present political campaign is being carried on," Goodwin attributed the attention the accident received and the allegedly conflicting reports issued after it.

Ferrell and George Sybil, a witness, were charged by reports after the crash, Goodwin remarked. He said Ferrell told him he just "didn't see anything."

"After the accident," Goodwin said, "the President's son left the ball. St. John followed and in the confusion, the question was asked: 'Why don't you debate Father Coughlin on the money question?'"

"To be placed, but not until after the election," Roosevelt replied.

Roosevelt ran into a veritable barrage of questions about the monetary policies of the administration in reference to the advocates of the National Union for Social Justice.

"Why was the fight of Congress to coin and regulate money taken from us?" was one question asked.

Roosevelt emphatically denied Congress had lost the power to coin and regulate currency.

Frequently during the evening at the forum which he is conducting, the President's son is asked to express his opinion of Father Coughlin, he replied:

"I think Father Coughlin is a sincerely sincere man. As a citizen, I think he is entitled to his opinion. As a politician, I think he is entitled to his opinion. As a politician, I think he is entitled to his opinion."

"Therefore, a vote, which ordinarily would go to the Democratic candidate, is given to the third party candidate, is directed to the Republican candidate."

The Roosevelt caravan will precede the Democratic state ticket tonight as it swings into Canton, Randolph, Dedham and Norwood and another in the series of rallies which have been scheduled by the Democratic state committee.

Hallie has been scheduled for tonight in the Ames School Hall, Dedham. The Norwood rally will be at the Norwood town hall, and Boston will be at the Boston Convention Center.

Governor James M. Curley and State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley are leading their associates on the ticket in the vigorous battle for houses which the Democratic party is waging.

The Senator Says:

Greenwood Most Bitter Foe

When The Senator comes in he is doing a W. C. Fields juggling act with a cup of black coffee and the shakes.

"Brandy, Timmy," says The Senator. "In R."

"In the cup or the saucer, Senator?" says Timmy.

"Timmy," says The Senator, "in the coffee. Drinking from the saucer long time no do."

"Senator," says Timmy, in his best apologetic tone, "I only ask because there is more coffee in the saucer than in the cup."

After this observation on the state of the Senator's health, his needs are conventionally supplied and deeply appreciated.

"Timmy," says The Senator, "I like Mayor Greenwood and I like Mayor Greenwood and I like Mayor Greenwood."

Royal 'Affection'

KING GIVES WALLY GEES

MONARCH UNASHAMED OF INTEREST IN HER

New York, Sept. 30 (US)—King Edward VIII of England is reported to have lavished a million dollars' worth of jewels on his American favorite, Mrs. Ernest Simpson, according to the October issue of Town and Country magazine.

The growing and open affection of the hitherto King for the social American is discussed by an Englishman (one in the royal circle, writing under the pseudonym of "Royal Photographer") in the article, entitled, "The Royal Train of King Edward."

"The King Edward has had plenty of experience. He knows his young son forget that he is forty-two, an age when a man usually knows his men heart pretty well.

"The growth of his affection for Mrs. Simpson are many and varied. Gifts may not mean much in such a case, but her American friends say that she has received a million dollars' worth of jewels.

All for Her

"In her company, he never looks at another woman. He watches her all the time, fondly and intently.

"The trouble about this situation is that it is a situation—more that it is being created with its insupportable persistence.

"To be blunt, it is one perfectly evident that Edward VIII does not care whether the whole world knows of his affection for Wallis Warfield Simpson.

"We are witnessing the reaction, under modern conditions and with modern methods, of a very ancient royal custom by which a sovereign imparts his court, his subjects, and every one who might be interested in the news that he had chosen a favorite.

It reaches Mrs. Simpson's showing importance that "the King (Mrs. Simpson) is being approached more and more by those who seek some royal favor—an invitation to court, or the royal presence at a charity affair. Like a Hollywood star, she receives fan mail from all parts of the world.

Queen Aloof

"The King is proud of her. Anyone bold enough to object to her being at the royal table would be quickly disgraced.

Wally's Life in Baltimore As Landlady's Daughter

Baltimore, Sept. 30 (AP)—Edith Charles, in the Southern home is a host and hostess to a Baltimore household.

But "Wally" Warfield Simpson, former favorite of King Edward VIII, has made the jump.

A reporter today found the twenty-five-year-old woman who has been in the habit of taking in boarders in Baltimore, in a new home in the city.

She was still motherly enough then, but now the guests in the neighborhood are taking much more in the line of the royal train.

"They say she is to be the queen of England," they say.

There have been rumors of her new paper and magazine since she was in the morning room with King Edward.

Colored and Mrs. Lindbergh were invited by the King, they met Mrs. Simpson.

"The Queen also, apparently, remains aloof."

"And as to the King, and the legends of Mr. Ernest Simpson—"

"To say that Mrs. Simpson is fond of the King is superfluous, and to say that she likes Ernest, and his court, can be doubted only in those who ignore the flexibility of the human mind."

"It is a fair assumption that a woman who has always enjoyed a well-paid existence, at times may hesitate to surrender it for the adventure, however glamorous, toward which she is drawn."

"And even if the Simpson will never be quite so simple as an ordinary mortal could be named as correspondent."

Husband's Plight

"Then, there is the position of her husband—a difficult position. The King likes him and has always gone out of his way to be considerate."

"But, of course, the full position cannot smooth over indefinitely the difficulties of a position which is becoming steadily more awkward. So awkward, indeed, that when Mrs. Simpson decided to go on the sailing trip, their separation became a fact."

"Her husband could also have joined the royal party, but didn't. Instead, the flat in Brynston Court is being left empty."

"Mrs. Simpson will move into bachelor quarters, while her husband will remain in the flat in the same style as Buckingham Palace."

"It is where the matter stands at present. It is not very satisfactory, but hardly very likely to lead—there may be a change."

"But first of all she, too, must adjust."

"Where, when, how, and in what manner, must always be decided for its magic words in Rome. If this happens things will become relatively simple."

CLUES Point to MURDER

MAINE WIFE'S DEATH PROBED

Portland, Me., Sept. 30—Clues described by county authorities as "inconsistent with suicide or accident" were found today in the fatal shooting of pretty Barbara Thompson Merrill, 19-year-old wife of Bernard A. Merrill, gun fencer.

The statement was issued by County Attorney Walter M. Tapley, Jr., and Sheriff Henry C. Burnell as Dr. Henry M. Telenchick, medical examiner, prepared to perform an autopsy at Maine General Hospital.

Mrs. Merrill was shot in her North Windham home late yesterday. She was found by her husband in a bedroom. There was a wound in her stomach and beside her was an ancient, long-barreled shotgun.

She died within a half hour.

3 OTHER GUNS THERE

County Attorney Tapley said that in his opinion the unusually long barrel of the shotgun made it improbable that Mrs. Merrill could have fired the weapon from her own body, but might have been used to pull the trigger was found.

There was not one of the guns found beside Mrs. Merrill. The other three were in the house.

Merrill told the authorities, they said, that he left his house about 10 o'clock, his newly home of his brother, Rupert, where he intended to adjust a telephone sight on one of his rifles. His wife, he said, had objected to his going, but there had been no quarrel, she merely saying:

"I'd rather you wouldn't."

At the time he left the house, Merrill related, his wife was dressing in a bedroom where she worked evenings.

He said he had left the house about two minutes and was standing in the street a short distance away talking to his father, Frank Merrill, when he heard his wife "cry out." He said he did not hear a shot.

RED ISSUE IS DESTROYED, PRESIDENT BELIEVES

Aboard Presidential Special En Route to Washington, Sept. 30 (INS)—In high spirits after his first smashing frontal attack on his political opponents, President Roosevelt was on his way back to Washington today prepared to embark tonight on a whirlwind campaign against "weak Republican leadership" after a very brief interlude of official business.

The President was confident he had "destroyed the false issue" on New Deal Communism and dictatorship by his dramatic repudiation at Syracuse of "the support of any advocate of Communism or of any other alienism."

But, chiefly, politicians should be glad that the special train was making about the enthusiastic manner in which the New York state Democratic convention received Mr. Roosevelt's thinly veiled one-two punch at his Republican adversary, Governor Alfred M. Ladd.

Speaking in Syracuse last night, the President did not mention Governor Ladd by name but his highly partisan audience suggested the definition by laughingly shouting "Laddism" when he pointed out some higher and called off his dog in the name of the Republican.

"GROUND CLEARING" TALK
And then, as he speaking directly to his opponent, he said this:

"You cannot be an old guard Republican in the East and a New Deal Republican in the West. You cannot promise to repeal laws before you have an audience. You cannot promise to pay money before you have an audience. You cannot promise to pay money before you have an audience. You cannot promise to pay money before you have an audience."

The Syracuse speech was described by presidential aides as a "ground clearing" address to pave the way for others that will come in rapid order on such specific issues as taxation, agriculture, housing and relief.

Tonight, Mr. Roosevelt will be aboard his private car, "Pamlico," making a last run through New Virginia and New Jersey.

Next week after a few days' rest at Hyde Park and one or two days in Washington, it was expected he would head West, probably stopping at his home in Boulder, Colo.

WINANT ACTION STIRS G. O. P.
Conserv. N. H., Sept. 30 (AP)—New Hampshire Republicans opened their convention here today, stirred over the resignation of their one-time governor, John G. Winant, from the social security board to defend the security program against Republican attacks.

In earlier last night Winant's action was far subject of much discussion and some delegates talked of bringing his name before the convention.

Party leaders said, however, no such action would take place.

Candidates including Governor H. Styles Briggs, candidate for U. S. Senate, Francis P. Murphy, candidate for governor, Representative Charles W. Tobey, seeking reelection and Arthur H. Jones, congressional candidate in the first district, conferred for several hours with Robert W. Upson, Republican committee chairman, upon the platform.

The hint charge that Postmaster General James A. Farley, now on leave of absence, is "using the prestige and power attached to federal appointments to build up a political machine designed to perpetuate the Democratic party in office" was made in a statement issued by former Postmaster William E. Hurley.

He declared that under the New Deal, ambition has been thwarted, business interfered with and opportunity stifled.

Under the New Deal appointment of Mr. Farley as candidate for state treasurer, pointed to the stoppage of his own career, in which he had advanced from letter carrier to postmaster.

"There always has been some politics in the federal service," the Hurley statement continued, "but it remained for Mr. Farley to put spoilsmanship in the government service on a mass production basis. It has put the civil service back 25 years."

Enter! Park Lane Suits at $35

for men who appreciate the finer touches of tailoring

This would be a grand chance to cut loose with a flood of superlatives—and with ample reason. But Park Lane Suits will never be sold that way! The very evident character of these brisk newcomers needs no high pressure talk or price comparison. You'll find the simple story of their quality far more impressive! Park Lane Suits are the exclusive product of a new custom-model shop in our Rochester plant. Here we have gathered a small group of highly trained specialists—tailors with years of training in the art of creating distinguished fashions. In their skilled hands, we have placed the finest fabrics our money can buy—with orders to forget mass production, and to concentrate on the finer touches of style and tailoring. We have shot high to combine vigorous, long-wearing wools with shape retaining quality. And when you see these suits, we think you'll agree that we've hit the bull's eye. Perhaps our price seems low, for suits of this type. But we've a sneaking idea that you won't object to saving what we save because "we make the clothes we sell." ALCAZAR'S 1850 HEROES EXTOL GEN. FRANCO

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
Copyright, 1936, by International News Service

With General Francisco Franco at Toledo, Sept. 30—The Alcazar is won, and the Spanish civil war has created a new dictator in Europe.

No power of Madrid can now check the onward sweep of General Franco's forces, and no competitor can challenge his victorious leadership.

Politics has nothing to do with the fact that 80 children, 80 women and 100 men, who came up from the dungeons of the Alcazar and today greeted General Franco as he marched into Toledo, are among the heroes of all history.

GREATER THAN VERDUN

Nothing in modern times can compare with their 71 days' defense, except Verdun, and there the forces were equal.

Here 110 combatants fought off 10,000 men from Toledo to Toledo in summer and lived on mice and rats meat, a little water, and a quart of water apiece daily.

Not all of them came up to greet Gen. Franco. Some were too dazed to move. All were dirty, and many of them could not understand they were free.

They had done nothing but fight for 71 days, and couldn't quit. The men kept fighting with machine guns and rifles and eating over the desolate ruins for an absent enemy.

We came to Toledo with Gen. Franco through streets only partly cleared of the debris of death.

HOUSE TOWN RUIN

The Alcazar, said to occupy more than a city block, had today all that is left of the ruin of the old city. It is the ruin of a city block in size. Around this ruin there was a band of mud 200 yards wide, a jagged, rocky wall.

To enter the fortress we had to climb for 100 meters up a hill, over a mountain of shell-blasted bricks, mud, tar, and glass.

At one place a ladder was used to avoid unexploded hand grenades, which nobody, at least to the best of our knowledge, had exploded.

Into the center of the court we walked. Gen. Franco, flanked by his 20 and 40 feet high, in the center of the court of what had been the city of Toledo.

It was difficult for the General to pick his way up and down these mountains of debris, to the top of the wall, nearly a wall, the debris of a city.

Gen. Franco passed to inspect the ruins and gold of Nationalist Spain, said to be the highest point of the ruins. The flag had just been put up again. Every time previously the flag had been taken down.

IMMOLATE A LEADER

We passed in a mob of the crowd of ragged veterans, who, according to the general's high position, came rushing out of the dark holes in the ground and threw themselves at him, embracing him with dirty, ragged arms and putting their hands against his cheek like the bearded, earthen-colored faces.

They embraced him with a green glow, their clothing was in tatters, their cheeks protruded, their hands shone, as though with pity.

There was little or no cheering. The moment was too profound for words.

Gen. Franco and Gen. Jose Varela said nothing for a long time. They only embraced and after that the ragged men and women. Then a tall, bearded man, ragged and pale as the average, stepped forward.

HONORS FOR HEROES

"Col. Jose Moscarda," said Gen. Franco, "I hereby confer upon you the cross of San Fernando, and upon the whole company, Spain's greatest heroes, the same cross collectively."

The cross of San Fernando is Spain's Victoria Cross, and Col. Moscarda was the commander-in-chief of the Alcazar's defense.

"The dogs!" suddenly cried the high voice of the little old man, his face as white as a sheet, as he pointed to Gen. Franco turned to him.

"The dogs! The dogs!" yelled the little man. "They thought they could whip us! Ha! Ha! Ha!"

Reds' Hobson Stunt Fails, So They Wreck a Church

This house of prayer is used for car parking in Spain. Marked by bullets, decimated by shells, this church at Almedaleja is used as an automobile parking lot by Reds during the civil war. The Reds also used the church as a fortress in a futile attempt to stop the Rebel advance on the city. Notice the debris of war that has piled up around the altar.

and at this everybody laughed a very blood-curdling laugh.

Then we went down into the dungeons with Gen. Franco. About 40 feet beneath the surface, we climbed through the remains of a ruined tower, about 40 by 50 feet in dimensions, where there were living 25 women and children.

An old lady, her own son said to her, "Don't cry, you see, but we were in the center of the room and 10 men were killed in all."

MEET THE BABIES

In the center there was a mother nursing her child, and another mother holding her baby. A third proudly came and introduced us to her progeny.

The baby was born 30 days ago, 15 minutes after the beginning of the Spanish war, when his mother was in the center of the room and 10 men were killed in all.

Madrid in Panic as Rebels Seize Railway, Peril Food

Madrid, Sept. 30 (UPI)—Threatening fingers of free rebel armies, gripped in a 20-mile semicircle around Madrid, today cut off the railroad line, according to insurgent broadcasts, and left only a single rail artery, already threatened by rebel troops, linking the capital with the outside world.

5 Die in Mexican Storm

Albuquerque, N. M., Sept. 30 (UPI)—Clearing skies today left five known dead in New Mexico's first snowstorm of the year.

IX HOSPITAL CASE

Looking through a gap in the wall, I counted 40 corpses in one small room.

We searched with the general to the hospital, a blood-drenched chamber still occupied by the wounded and a sad scene, some without medicine, looked palely at these structures from another world.

Major Marcos Pallas, the chief of the hospital, told us that the hospital was a blood-drenched chamber still occupied by the wounded and a sad scene, some without medicine, looked palely at these structures from another world.

Spain's Reds learned a lesson from Richard Pearson Hobson's Spanish War heroism. This striking picture shows the dismantled steamer, Haile Selassie, broken by the rocks. It was sunk by the Reds in an effort to block the harbor of Pasaia-St. Juan, Spain, and thereby cut off access to important Rebel oil stores. But the plan went awry when the tide swung the 4000-ton steamer out of the main channel.

HAILE SEEKS WAR'S END

Genoa, Sept. 30 (AP)—Emperor Haile Selassie is ready to "sacrifice a considerable portion of his rights under the League covenant" in effect settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian war, Lawrence Tassie, Ethiopian delegate, told the League of Nations assembly today.

The council decided indirectly not to abandon its supervision of the territory.

Baby Near Death From Crib Fall

The name of the four-month-old son of Irving Smith, of Canton street, South End, was given on the danger list at Massachusetts Memorial Hospital today when the infant was rushed there by police, summoned to the Smith home when the worried father rang a citizen's alarm.

Doctors said the child, who was suffering from hemorrhages, had severely fallen from his crib and struck his head.

Post Debs Thrilled With Plane Trip to Providence

By BETTY ALDEN

POPULAR WINTER snow trains now have their aeronautical counterpart in the new bicycle plane which made its first trip from Boston Airport yesterday morning with a passenger list of post debs.

Just as skiing enthusiasts journey far afield in search of snow and cleared hills, bicyclists now fly abroad in search of picturesque country through which to ride.

As yesterday's flight was the first of its kind, the plane and aeronautical features of the trip interested the girls even more than the bicycling. In spite of the fact that they had looked forward to a riding through the scenic, rural districts outside of Providence.

The plane used for the trip is one of the enormous transports which makes the regular flight from Newark to Los Angeles. As soon as the girls climbed aboard they became interested in all the latest features of an air liner. They inspected the commissary and tiny steward's galley.

The private stewardess called the sky room, and even tried their hand at making up a berth.

When the pilot set the plane down at the Providence Airport, they besieged him with all sorts of questions about flying and his experience in the air.

They had all flown before but never on such a friendly, informal sort of trip, so took advantage of the opportunity to learn what they could about all the gadgets and dials in front of the pilot's seat.

This interesting aeronautical conversation took up so much time that before they realized it, just a scant hour remained for bicycling. A tandem was found in the fleet of bikes at their disposal at the airport, and after several hilarious pairs had tried riding it around the cement runways, the whole crowd rode out to a roadside inn for a bite of luncheon.

Everyone of the 12 girls who went along got a big thrill out of the flight. As one of the riders, Betty Alden, said: "I sold me on air travel. It's such a thrilling experience to go up in one state and come down in another a few minutes later."

Rennette Plimpton enjoyed it a lot more than the flight she took over the English Channel a couple of years ago, for she could pick out familiar landmarks in the panorama stretched out below the plane.

Cynthia Waters took time off from her journalistic activities to go along and other cycling-enthusiasts in the group were Mary Bird, Kate Johnson and Frances McEwen, Freddie Sargent, Elsie Burroughs, Rex Hardon, Priscilla Murphy and Isabel Hullings of Baltimore, who is stopping off at Rennette Plimpton's for a few days en route from her summer vacation on the Riviera to her home in Baltimore.

If a few of our more conventional courtesiers had been on hand when the girls piled out of the plane at Providence they could have made interesting notes on what the fashionable Boston deb is wearing. . . . Outfitted in long, flowing, light-colored, but all had one thing in common. . . . an erudite course pinned on each shoulder. . . . looking quite delicate and out of place against such a rough and ready background.

RENNETTE PLIMPTON and her guest, Miss Hullings, made quite a velutary day of it. . . . for as soon as they finished their flight they went up to the Luxor Hotel for an excursion on the Blue Train.

This is one of the city's most novel little cocktail rooms. . . . shaped and decorated like the interior of a railroad car, with walls painted French blue and covered with gaudy French posters, the new dance floor, about the size of the proverbial pinball, was very popular with the crowd of flirty fuddling men and their girls who attended the opening party about the train yesterday afternoon.

Any Lang, who has been to the Land of the Vikings since last we saw her at any social event in town, dropped in with Oscar Skinner. Several times she had appeared, only to be found in a quiet corner recounting her stories about the fjords and her visit with Astrid Reed in Norway, to some newcomer she had not seen since before her trip.

Dress of Deep Garnet Velvet

HELEN LANG carried off a steady stream of conversation with Bob Livermore, Jr., and Adele Hooper, Tan Sargent and Arnett McKenna had a lengthy discussion about music. . . . Adele looked very well in a deep garnet velvet dress with full bishop sleeves.

Folly and Celine Richardson found comfortable spots in the divans which line the sides of the "railroad car" and let everyone gather around them to chat and joke. . . . Ellen Gray and Frances Shea were in a foursome, both celebrating the beginning of another season at Radcliffe. . . . their shawls sat today. . . . Frances wore a black novelty wool suit with a short gaiter jacket and a few red feathers on her velvet belt.

Debs Greet Sue Carl at Luncheon

AFTER a few days of inactivity, the debutantes returned to their long series of autumn presentation parties this afternoon.

Today's party was in honor of Miss Sue Carl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Carl of Longwood Towers in Brookline, and took the form of a luncheon at the Hotel Farm in Lincoln.

Miss Carl's dress was of Burgundy red, which blended well with the green and autumnal decorations and the antique paneled walls of the dining room. The skirt of the waist crepe dress was trimmed with bands of powder blue velvet. A small hat trimmed with short plumes of powder blue and burgundy, and a corsage of deep purple orchids completed the costume.

Miss Carl wore a dress of dark green wool crepe, accented with a dark blue belt, brooch and shoes and a bronze buckle on the belt. Miss Janet and Nancy McNeil, cousins of the debutante, had the seats of honor, on the right and left of the table. Though he did not attend the luncheon, Samuel D. Hays, Jr., Miss Carl's grandfather, came on from Bryn Mawr, Pa., last evening to offer his congratulations.

A few debutantes were at the party to counter-balance the debutante. In the former group were Jean Hays, Nancy McNeil, and Anne Capner, while Peggy Carter, Constance Taylor, Frederic Sargent and Edwina Plimpton represented the non-deb.

Among this season's debutantes, the luncheon were Elizabeth Hunsford, Betty Shogry, Elizabeth Roth, Eugene Crocker, Letitia Allen, Betty Allen, Jean and Elizabeth Clark, Edwina Conliffe, Eleanor McLean, Harriet Cole, Marion Miller, Emily Nichols, Carolyn Pierce, Joan Pratt, Janet Sabine, Pauline Keightley, Virginia Vogel, Virginia Ward, Mary Porter Wardwell and Rosalind Wilgins. Several other parties will be given in Miss Carl's honor later in the season.

The rumor current that Herbert Marshall is leaving Hollywood for good and that when he departs Thursday he will say farewell to his friends here for New York is being widely spread. Marshall, who has been in Hollywood for a number of years, is said to be going to New York to work on a picture in England but will not have time, as he is due back here within a month to star in "Second Man" for the season.

"GIVE ME YOUR HEART"

By Lewis Allen Browne
A COSMOPOLITAN PRODUCTION
RELEASED BY WARNER BROTHERS

NOW PLAYING AT METROPOLITAN THEATRE

CHAPTER 18

"I've known her since she was a little girl. Her father was a great friend to me, and a great help when I was struggling to write—not but what writing will always be a struggle with me!"

"Say, that's swell. Do you know, you are the first one of her English friends who has turned up since we were married!"

Jim was genuinely pleased.

Up in her room Linda was frantically working to remove all trace of her hair, and of her hair-entourage, trying to pull herself together.

"Linda," Tubbs said, unable to think of her as "Linda," "was always sensitive about places where she had been unhappy. She really ought to make a trip to England with you. It is the one place she should go."

Exactly what I told her, Mr. Barrow. Florence agreed.

"Jim would not mind as long as he understood."

"Linda should see her old friends, she shouldn't try to shut everything up in her mind."

Tubbs Tells

"I understand that when her father died she was practically alone." Jim put it in the form of a question.

"Rather worse than alone. I would say—Tubbs replied, with considerable emphasis.

"Indeed?"

"You see, Mr. Baker, Linda's mother died when she was an infant. Her father was everything to her. After he died, some a heart attack while talking with her, there was only an eccentric aunt in England. Linda's father died at his villa in Italy. Well, this aunt—Linda, do you see it? Not exactly hated Linda—"

"Hated in use for her?" Florence asked.

"Exactly the way to say it. The poor girl was naturally misstruck."

"Bill never has recovered, quite," Jim explained, rather sadly. "I wish I knew how to help her recover. It makes me feel like an awful flop to know that she has something on her mind, and not to be able to lift it up for her."

"Take her along with me. I'll stand with you, Jim, as Mr. Barrow suggests," Florence urged.

"Well," Jim signed his highball thoughtfully. "Perhaps. But if Bill is really improved in spirits, and goes only to please me, will it do her any good? Won't she be more miserable than ever?"

"I doubt it, Jim. She may think she still is miserable, but when she starts her old home and meets old friends, I can see it will be just what is needed. Florence turned to Tubbs. "Bill does have many friends there, naturally."

Naturally. "Yes, I do," said Tubbs.

"That makes it professional—my fees are frightfully high."

"Ah, then, Miss Tubbs, Linda naturally has many friends."

"Everyone is friendly with Bill," Jim declared.

"I wonder," Tubbs touched his highball and spoke as though the thought had just come to him. "I wonder, Mr. Baker, if you and Linda would give me a dinner tomorrow night?"

ONE OF THOSE very simple things that's a m a s i e r stroke—you know, something so simple it's amazing? I'm sure you'll feel the same way we did about these new mints for cooking that are such a great advance over past uncertain methods of obtaining this desirable flavor.

They resemble an after-dinner mint only they're four times as large and two times as strong in all of peppermint. The mints take the place of sugar and flavoring in any recipe and they can be used practically interchangeably with the amount of sugar called for.

There was in a very attractive Quaker package which has 12 mints inside, and it's a very nice looking mint. The mints take the place of sugar and flavoring in any recipe and they can be used practically interchangeably with the amount of sugar called for.

THE FATHER'S DELIGHT—These mints are a real treat for the father who is always looking for a new way to make his children's food more interesting. The mints take the place of sugar and flavoring in any recipe and they can be used practically interchangeably with the amount of sugar called for.

Unusual Fur Detail in These Congress Choices

GONE is the day when quantities of fur signified the quality of your new fall suit! With individualizing the keynote, the thing is manipulation. Persian in slim bands is made to outline the gallant line of squared-off shoulders, to hold up the chin, to edge tunics or skirt hems in Russian-princess effect. Caraculs of various shades and degrees of curl make sleeves, or half-sleeves, or half-backs and whole fronts!

Left, Miss Blanche O'Riordan models a three-piece costume suit of ribbed water-grey wool. Chinese lamb makes the upper sleeve and the young collar of the jacket. It's a wardrobe type, with lots of use ahead for coat and suit as separate pieces. Another echo of the French revolution motif is the extremely peaked version of the Liberty cap, with dove-grey velvet cocotte and edging.

Right, Miss Davis Poland swings along in a striking three-piece costume suit. Nubbed wool, the feature is the longer tunic and the interesting use of Persian lamb in narrow bands. Perfect for street wear, the costume achieves a place in gala hours by disclosing a handsome house of black crepe shirt through and through with a basketry design of gold thread. The hat is a tucked and quite sophisticated version of the very becoming Glen-garry.

For shopping information on either costume, phone Annie Bink, Fashion Editor, Liberty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

By IDA JEAN KAIN

THAT'S THE day when quantities of fur signified the quality of your new fall suit! With individualizing the keynote, the thing is manipulation. Persian in slim bands is made to outline the gallant line of squared-off shoulders, to hold up the chin, to edge tunics or skirt hems in Russian-princess effect. Caraculs of various shades and degrees of curl make sleeves, or half-sleeves, or half-backs and whole fronts!

Left, Miss Blanche O'Riordan models a three-piece costume suit of ribbed water-grey wool. Chinese lamb makes the upper sleeve and the young collar of the jacket. It's a wardrobe type, with lots of use ahead for coat and suit as separate pieces. Another echo of the French revolution motif is the extremely peaked version of the Liberty cap, with dove-grey velvet cocotte and edging.

Right, Miss Davis Poland swings along in a striking three-piece costume suit. Nubbed wool, the feature is the longer tunic and the interesting use of Persian lamb in narrow bands. Perfect for street wear, the costume achieves a place in gala hours by disclosing a handsome house of black crepe shirt through and through with a basketry design of gold thread. The hat is a tucked and quite sophisticated version of the very becoming Glen-garry.

For shopping information on either costume, phone Annie Bink, Fashion Editor, Liberty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

Don't Ever Give Up in Bridge!

If an athlete fails to make supreme effort in competition, he paints for himself the unenviable but highly descriptive title, "quitter," or, in more thorough-going American phraseology, he has "been yellow."

A Contract player can be "out-low" too. No that I am admonishing the bravery of military men from it! But when a player makes a "give-up" play, rather than fight the battle in its final, few years can be too reprehensible for him.

Most of what appears to be age isn't age at all. It's just pure laziness. You know of women under thirty whose arms are old-looking before their time. That happens because they never exercise their muscles. There are, however, a number of effective exercises for these upper arm muscles in the two leaflets, "Arm Reducing" and "Back Reducing." claim his partner's diamonds, and North again, with his choice of four clubs instead of three spades, completed a picture of "holding no it should not be."

East opened the diamond card, dummy ruffed, and the king of hearts was led. West had off and won a low heart continuation with the Jack.

And now West led his nerve completely. He was on observed with the fear that declarer would make six overtricks on his redoubled contract but he lost all sense of proportion.

He saw that dummy's nine of hearts was established by the lead of the Queen and a ruff-finesse on declarer's part, therefore passed a spade discard. To foretell that West led a spade up to dummy's imposing suit. Four East was led—so was with the Ace, but no matter what he then did, could not take another trick.

Remarkable vision and courage on West's part inevitably would have defeated the redoubled contract. He should have retained a diamond instead of a spade. Declarer would be forced to ruff in the dummy.

INEXPENSIVE SATISFYING

Only the Right to Abuse Liberty Is Denied

ACCORDING to the American Civil Liberties Union, the American Legion upholds a "false concept of Americanism which denies freedom of expression to certain so-called subversive or radical groups and ideas."

The Civil Liberties Union is notoriously active in the defense of subversive and radical groups that ABUSE THE PRIVILEGES accorded them by their residence in this country.

The American Legion, in contrast, prefers to dedicate itself to defense of the nation AGAINST THE DESTRUCTIVE ABUSES of which the subversives and radicals are guilty.

Any citizen whose judgment is influenced by patriotism will have no difficulty deciding which of these concepts of Americanism is false and which is safe.

The American Legion found its patriotic course made very clear by this attack upon its program against disloyal doctrines.

The Legion rightly took this attack to mean the forces of subversion are TAKING THE OFFENSIVE IN AMERICA. In consequence, the Legion's support of "100 per cent Americanism" at its Cleveland convention was the most determined in the history of the organization.

Professors In Politics

BELIEF that the New Deal professors have damaged the standing of the teaching profession was expressed by Dr. William E. Rappard, president of the University of Geneva, to a group of Swiss compatriots in New York city.

Asked what he thought of "government of professors, by professors and for professors," he answered:

"I don't think your so-called Brain Trust has added appreciably to the prestige of the profession which I represent."

This is an opinion shared by most American educators.

The ridiculous antics of the theorists who have been responsible for most of the disastrous errors of the New Deal have been embarrassing to all intelligent leaders in the American educational system.

The retirement of the "professors in politics" will be gratefully welcomed by the teaching profession as a whole.

Still Fighting On!

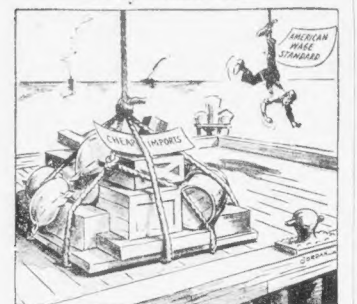

OURNMENT of the 70th national camp of the Grand Army of the Republic in New York was taken to the ringing chorus of "March until the last man is dead!"

saddened by the tragedy this day is, is heartened by the knowledge that the fight is never really die.

The Grand Army of the Republic is as potent as ever in the defense of American liberty as it was in the defense of the nation at national crisis their loyalty bridge.

The resolution of the Washington encampment pledging cooperation with the American Legion "in putting down Red influences at work in the United States," is proof of the enduring patriotism of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Buy American

The monthly survey of business by the American Federation of Labor shows that heavy industry's production increased 34.4 per cent during the first seven months of this year while the consumer goods industries gained only 4.1 per cent.

"Workers' income is not rising fast enough to lift production in the consumer goods industries," says the report. "In the long run the heavy industries cannot continue high production unless consumer industries take the lead."

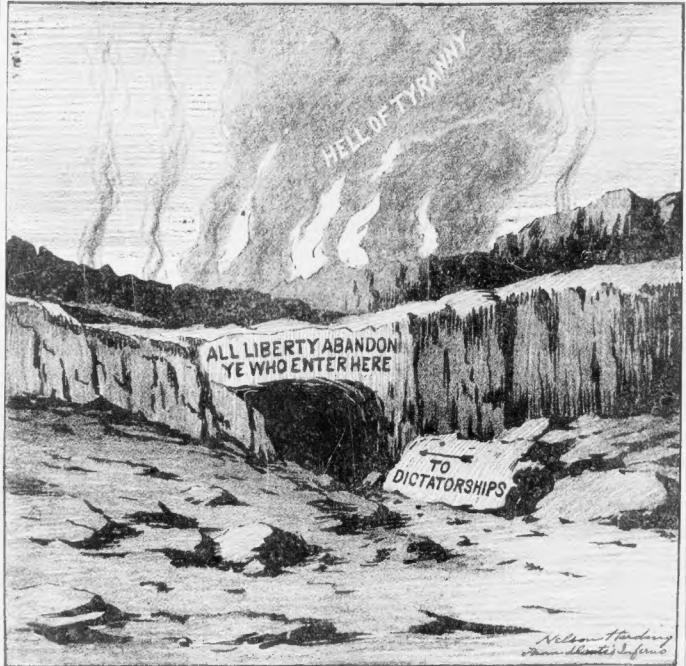

In brief, this means the American public IS NOT BUYING ENOUGH AMERICAN GOODS TO GIVE JOBS TO 10,000,000 UNEMPLOYED.

The Raw Deal trade treaties, permitting the wholesale dumping of CHEAP FOREIGN GOODS, are taking AMERICAN MONEY AWAY FROM AMERICAN INDUSTRY AND THUS HAMSTRINGING AMERICAN WAGES.

To reduce unemployment and help this country's industries and labor, "BUY AMERICAN."

Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator and champion spokesman of the New Deal squanders, predicts that the WPA or some similar setup will be a permanent part of the Federal government. He argues that the State should be responsible for the unemployed because of the "national emergency" created by the "national unemployment problem."
